

FEDERAL COURTHOUSE BUILDING

Orlando, Florida

The interior renovation project for the Federal Courthouse Building in downtown Orlando, Florida offered challenges to the typical construction process. Security measures included armed guards, and detection devices, used to ray all equipment and tools. Limited access, special working hours had to be considered to achieve the schedule. The schedule was met. The new courtrooms and judge's chambers were state of the art in technology, as well as an example of fine wood craftsmanship.
